Federation Rally,
Thursday Noon

It is to be held at the Y. M. C. A. building on Thursday with a one o'clock luncheon. Reservations must be made by Tuesday evening with Mrs. Nolan if tickets have not already been purchased.

$110,000 A MONTH IS CHEVROLET PAY

Salaries and Wages Running on Basis of Million Per Year.

Salaries and wages paid to employees of the Chevrolet Motor company in Jamesville now total approximately $110,000 a month, according to a statement made by J. J. Jacobson, local comptroller. This puts the income of the local employees well over the million dollar mark annually. It is being paid out to a number now nearing 1,000 mark. It does not include the Fisher Body company.

Mr. Jacobson's statement was made to a group of local business men who called upon the Chevrolet officials to extend greetings and offer their aid in making Jamesville a larger city. Those in the party were E. J. Baumgardner, of the Merchants and Savings bank; Louis Levy of Levy's store; Sidney Rockwell of the Rockwell & Sons; and Mr. Murphy and Frank Sinclair of the Gazette.

Plan Steady Pace
Speaking to the Jamesville men, G. J. Jacobson, Chevrolet manager of the local plant, said it is the hope of Chevrolet that their business will be made to reach such a point through their $3,000,000 national advertising campaign that it will continue at a steady production pace all year round, doing away with seasonal fluctuations. If this can be realized, it will be a big thing for Chevrolet, employing a large force all year round. He also said Chevrolet will soon have a completely modern sales room in Jamesville.

Work Is Now Being Done to clear off the vacant spots on the company's property here, said L. J. Stewart, production manager, with the idea of beautifying it with lawns and trees. While the Chevrolet officials, he stated business of the local plant will depend upon sales, he said he hoped the time will come when the foundry here will be utilized in the production of the foundation left by the Sanson for another building will be used for a new building—that it may be possible some day to have a car plant on the ground up in Jamesville. In his remarks, he pointed to the roadway leading from the Beloit concrete road to industrial avenue, urging that it be paved to make the drive away people a better impression of the city.

Big Business in Parts
Chevrolet is now on a basis of doing a big business in parts, it was said by J. W. Lohmiller, manager of the parts and service department. The local plant services as far as Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, to the southern part of South Dakota and east to Lake Michigan.

SECRET METHODS

SCORED BY KUCKUK

come tax. It will, however, he explained, be reached by the time Senator Kuckuk in his statement said that the finance committee had met last week without mentioning the time that a new tax bill would be drawn.

On Friday afternoon, shortly before four o'clock, the committee went into executive session and it was decided that they should take up the drawing of a new tax bill, the senator's statement said.

"In looking over the members of the committee, I found that there were absentees, including Mr. Kuckuk, Mr. Rutledge, Mr. Summerville and Mr. Matheson."

"I protested that the time was too short for such an important undertaking and upon inquiry it developed that a conference had been held the evening before by certain members of the finance committee to which conference none of the persons mentioned, including myself, had been invited."

"I was then informed that the important features of this proposed bill had been decided upon by the conference and would again be presented to the committee and that there was a reason why the bill should not be acted upon and recommended for introduction that evening."

"I was surprised that the time was too short for such an important undertaking and upon inquiry it developed that a conference had been held the evening before by certain members of the finance committee to which conference none of the persons mentioned, including myself, had been invited."

The tax commission announced Tuesday that in reply to a request from Governor Blaine, it is preparing a statement to show the method used by the finance committee in determining tax schedules in its new tax bill. The governor is understood to have intimated to the committee in a letter that the new measure would fall to produce the revenue needed to meet the deficit caused by repeal of the mill taxes.

When members of the tax commission appeared before the finance committee to furnish information, they are said by committee members to have explained that the information furnished was much of a guess, and that they were not prepared to take any action on the bill. It is reported to be on this basis that the commission drafted the tax schedules in its measure.

Whether Governor Blaine has indicated any opposition to the committee bill, finance members would not say.

OLD-FASHIONED STYLE REVUE IS BANQUET FEATURE

An old fashioned style revue, bringing to life the dashing ladies of Oyster's magazine, a curious combination of 90 years ago, was the feature of the entertainment at Trinity church parish house, Monday night. Mrs. Mark Postwick and Miss Mary Postwick had charge of the entertainment. Continues in column nearly a century ago were worn by Mesdames John Dady, Mark Postwick, Paul Owen, Ralph Southerland and the Misses Helen Woolf, Mary Postwick, Evelyn Kuehage, Martha Bell, Hazel Weirick, Mary Stevens and Edna Boardley. John Dady announced the titles and Mrs. Edna Postwick played piano selections while the pictures were shown.

Before the program began, the Rev. Dady, in his instruction, gave a talk on the home for aged women, St. John's, which is to be rebuilt on the original site. The home is to cost $125,000 and will be made up of 6 by 8 ft. cottages of each. The present building has been condemned by the fire ordinance of Milwaukee.

Out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Nolan Ritter, Minneapolis; Mrs. Edna Postwick, St. Paul; Mrs. Tucker, Chicago.

Religious Study Period During School Asked

Plans working toward establishment of a religious instruction period for all school pupils were started by the week-day religious day school committee, meeting Monday at the Y. M. C. A. It is made up of the following members: Catholic and Protestant church. A special committee was organized, consisting of Dean J. P. Ryan, Pastor of St. Mary's church, and the Rev. J. A. McElroy, pastor of St. John's church, for a definite time during which pupils shall spend in their respective churches for religious instruction.

A smaller executive committee, which has been active between meetings of the larger committee, reported on type 2 of this work which calls for community denominational plans, under which the churches and parishes of the city are to have a definite period for this instruction. This was adopted, together with a request for the first two periods on Friday for the Catholic church and on Saturday for the Protestant church. It is not planned to start instruction until that time. The Rev. Mr. McElroy heads this smaller committee, as well as the committee as a whole, and others on it are the Rev. R. C. Peterson, Pastor of St. John's church, and Miss Ruth Jeffries.

Another meeting of the entire committee will be held as soon as the newly-appointed committee has worked out the plan, presented it to the schools, and received a reply.

CITY NEWS BRIEFS

Mark Poyner.—Five teachers are assisting Mrs. Sadie C. Fox, assistant county superintendent of schools last week in marking examination papers of seventh and eighth graders. The examinations were held in rural schools last week. It probably will be two weeks before results are completely tabulated.

Visit High School.—Miss Rhodes, Reedeburg, and Miss Shew, Madison, inspected the Jamesville High school Tuesday.

Three Couples Will Wed.—Heralding the approach of the marriage season, three couples in the past 24 hours have applied for marriage licenses at the Rock county clerk's office. They are: Leiland C. Pratt and Edna M. Van Dozer, Jamesville; James J. Skarada, Chicago, and Marie J. Lhotak, Beloit; Dr. Theodore W. Klein, Fort Atkinson, and Tracy J. Lankemak, Evansville.

Thought Man Dead.
Motorman Moore told how he saw the three youths on the Jackson street bridge late that night and saw Wilson appear dead. Patrolman Serstad testified to having seen Wilson at 8 p. m. and that he asked when the next day he would see him again. He did not see him again until he lay dead on the lawn next morning. Serstad continued. Night Watchman Nagan, Chevrolet, said Wilson appeared to be in a "stupor" when they came to the plant about 11 o'clock.

Both Meas and Hanson told practically the same stories as the District Attorney Danwidie the day they were arrested, corroborating identically with the other evidence. Meas admitted the drinking party for him, in Hanson's room, they said.

Temperature Lowered
"It was evident that he had consumed a great quantity of alcohol in the evening," said Professor Smith, "in my opinion his whole system slumped right down and stopped functioning within an hour or two hours after eating. As he continued drinking, his temperature probably dropped from 98.2, normal, down to 92 or 93 degrees and he was riding around in a car with his temperature that low. On top of that, the Beloit weather bureau records show the temperature was as low as 50 degrees that night."

"As a result, his whole vitality was lowered and his resistance weakened. Toxicology records show that from 3 1/2 to 4 ounces of alcohol taken rapidly will constitute a fatal dose." "Then you would say that any man who would drink a lot of liquor following a heavy meal eaten rapidly would be subject to death?" asked Mr. Danwidie.

"Yes," Professor Smith replied, "he would be taking grave chances."

"bolting" of a hearty meal. The stomach was more than a third full, containing a large amount of alcohol and great quantities of undigested food, some of which had not even been masticated.

Will Prosecute Hanson.
At the conclusion of the inquest, District Attorney S. G. Danwidie announced that at an early date he would recommend to Judge A. L. Maxwell the dismissal of manslaughter charges against both Hanson and Meas, who were with him at the time of the drinking party of May 2 which resulted in his death.

"There will be no further action against Meas but I shall prefer a liquor charge against Hanson as the evidence clearly shows, and he admits it, that he furnished the gin for the party," Mr. Danwidie declared.

F. E. McGovern, Milwaukee, former governor, is expected to represent Hanson when the liquor case comes up. He was in litigation in a Milwaukee court, Tuesday, and unable to attend the inquest. In his stead, appeared W. Rice, a member of the firm of Rice, Milwaukee, who was in charge of Hanson's defense. George W. Blanchard, Edgemoor, represented Meas, but neither he nor Rice asked any questions at the inquest.

12 Witnesses Examined
Besides Prof. Smith, 11 other witnesses were examined by Mr. Danwidie. He was in litigation in a Milwaukee court, Tuesday, and unable to attend the inquest. In his stead, appeared W. Rice, a member of the firm of Rice, Milwaukee, who was in charge of Hanson's defense. George W. Blanchard, Edgemoor, represented Meas, but neither he nor Rice asked any questions at the inquest.

Miss Selma Gogg Again Delights Large Audience

Since her last public appearance in Jamesville, Miss Selma Gogg, Chicago, soprano, has improved wonderfully. She was the opinion of those who heard her in concert Monday night at Liberty hall. The recital, given under the auspices of the Music club, was well attended and enthusiastically received. A varied program, most of the numbers being in English, was presented by the soprano and her piano accompanist,

Mr. Gary and Twelve Hours.
Chairman Gary of the United States steel corporation has made a statement that the steel mills could not abandon the 12 hour day because there was a "shortage of labor." It is merely an excuse, not a reason. The attitude of Mr. Gary is as dangerous to industrial peace as that of Radical Foster. The excuses for sabotage of property by Foster are about on the par with the excuses for sabotage of human beings made by Mr. Gary. A shorter day in the steel mills is inevitable—certain to come. Why will Chairman Gary, who has just preached an able sermon on the need for the golden rule in business and international affairs, not apply his own remedy to his own business, is hard to answer. Twelve hours in a steel mill is as much a menace to industry as the four or five hour day advocated by Foster. There is reason, humanity and decency in the demand for a shorter day in the steel industry. Mr. Gary will make more bolsheviks here in a day than the Russian soviet propaganda will in five years. "If the blind lead the blind shall they not both fall into the ditch?"

Railroad Valuation and Politics.
Out of a meeting called by Senator LaFollette at Chicago has come an organization to be known as the "National Conference for the Valuation of the American Railroads." While the members of that conference spent most of the time in attacking the railroads as a group and the Interstate Commerce commission in particular, the general agreement was that something was very wrong in the railroads as now operated and every trend of thought and argument, no matter how artfully concealed, showed that the ultimate goal of the conference was for ultimate public ownership of the transportation lines.
First, it is necessary to create a situation in the public mind, a situation that does not actually exist but which as the psychologist says, is an asset only in "mind value." This is being brought about by the attacks on the railroads and the Interstate Commerce commission. Mr. Bryan has been at it a long time. Way back in 1898 he came from Europe with government ownership as his battle cry. For the purpose of valuation he wanted replacement cost used as a basis. That is what the LaFollette conference, or rather Senator LaFollette, does not want. It is alleged that with present high costs of materials, the valuation would be higher than the original cost, hence the determination to have valuations set at the first price paid. Mr. Bryan is not clear as to what he wants, but no one cares much about that, and outside of Wisconsin few care what Senator LaFollette has determined. Nothing definite beyond the organization of the National Conference was accomplished by the two days meeting.
Railroad valuation work has been going on for the last ten years. It has cost the government 25 million dollars and the railroads 62 millions. It was said by Senator LaFollette, when he first advocated the measure in 1910, that it would cost the government only $2,400,000 to value the roads and it would save 150 times that sum to the people in one year in freight rates alone. That was just another promise like hundreds of others, that has not been fulfilled. Senator LaFollette proposes that all this work shall be done over and the whole economic system be upset for another decade.
The question of railroad valuation is raised as a direct issue apparently for the one purpose of supplying ammunition for the progressive bloc when congress opens in December. It also has a direct bearing on the presidential campaign and the candidates in 1924. We now have Senator Borah with his world court issue; Henry Ford with his $200,000,000 in cash, which is a very potent platform; Hiram Johnson with just Hiram as an issue and Mr. LaFollette with his railroads. Always wrong no matter what they do. The Interstate Commerce commission is working out the railroad problem as fast as it can. It may not be always right but it certainly is not always wrong. We have passed through a period of readjustment which has been severe on all concerned—railroads, capital, labor, farmers, professional persons. We need more calm and less agitation.
The stated object of railroad valuation is to arrive at a basis of a railroad's maximum profit to be permitted by law. When that profit is more than the amount permitted there is to be a readjustment of rates so as to keep within the limit set. This is the theoretical proposal. But there have been men, like Mr. Bryan, who have been more frank about the matter and Mayor Hyland, representing the Hearst ideas at the conference, plainly and openly in favor of the government owning and operating the roads. Mr. Bryan fears the public ownership only in its possibilities for greater centralization of power at Washington and the building of a political machine through centralization. He is therefore between Scylla and Charybdis. Mr. Bryan has never been an accepted authority on economic questions any more than he is now on scientific subjects. Senator LaFollette is cleverer and tinges his at-

SAVING SIGHT
By FREDERIC J. HASKIN
Washington—National waste in eyesight is beginning to receive attention. The Eye Sight Conservation Council, recently organized, is endeavoring to show the country that what, the most precious of the senses, is being used altogether too carelessly and with appalling results.
This organization states that of the 42,000,000 persons engaged in gainful occupations more than half are handicapped by defective vision or eye strain. A still more startling estimate indicates that out of 24,000,000 school children, 19,000,000 suffer from visual defects, most of which could be corrected.
Taking statistics from another angle, we learn that nine out of ten persons over 21 years of age have defective sight. In other words, only one person in ten enters upon adult life with normal vision, and beyond 21 years the number decreases until at 40 years it is almost impossible to find an example of perfect sight.
The seriousness of this condition can be appreciated when you consider that we live in a visual world. Some insects with feeble sight depend chiefly upon a keenly discriminating sense of smell to guide them through life. But in man the visual apparatus has been developed, and smell, touch, and even hearing, have been more or less neglected, until sight is by far the most important of the senses. And the importance of sight is becoming still more intensified as civilization advances. A great deal of the work done in specialized industry requires close visual concentration. Reading and writing play a larger part in life as more people are educated. The eyes have finer adjustments to make and for longer periods of time.
In spite of the recognized importance of the eyes they are said to be more abused than any other part of the body. The eye is an extremely delicate organ. It does not protect against misuse with the howling rage of an injured tooth. Even if there is a defect in the eye structure, it may adapt itself to bad light, fine print, and close work with perhaps only a headache as evidence of strain.
Because the eye has this tendency to accommodation a person is inclined to think his eyes are all right so long as vision is fairly clear.
It is stated that of the millions of people who have defective vision the great majority are unaware of any defect. They do not know that they lack the full measure of the sense of sight. Others do not understand that their sight is gained only through nerve exhausting eye strain.
These conditions, shown through surveys of industries and public schools, led to the organization of the Eye Sight Conservation Council, which announces that its disinterested aim is to further the public welfare and to increase the efficiency, comfort and happiness of humanity. It lists on its board of council the Secretary of Labor, the Commissioner of Education, and officers of various scientific and educational institutions.
This organization is collecting and circulating information on the various angles of eyesight conservation. It particularly urges universal eye examinations of industrial workers and of school children in city and rural schools.
Special interest in the question of eyesight in industry has been aroused since Herbert Hoover's survey of waste in industry. A group of engineers made this survey from a strictly economic standpoint, and their report included findings closely connecting eyesight with efficiency.
The report stated that correcting substandard vision of workers is dollars and cents economy for an employer. It showed that thousands of accidents to the eyes occur in factories every year and that 75 per cent of these accidents can be eliminated by practical precautions. It also showed that not enough attention is paid to lighting arrangements in shops and factories—another matter of dollars and cents efficiency.
Some firms already recognize the truth of these three points and scattered attempts are being made to conserve the valuable sight of the industrial worker.
For the past three years one large firm has employed an eye specialist on a part time basis. Industries where eye hazards are involved are studying ways of reducing accidents. Goggles are the most generally adopted method of protecting the eyes against flashes of flying metal, glaring light, dust, and radiant energy.
The Bureau of Standards will test any glass designed to protect the eyes against strong light rays to determine whether or not the glass will safely exclude the dangerous rays and at the same time permit the wearer to see sufficiently.
It is now reported by various plants that eye accidents are reduced 75 to 95 per cent where the right kind of goggles are used in eye hazardous occupations.
The third means of saving eyesight mentioned by the engineers' report should be given considerable attention, not only in industry, but in offices, homes, schools, and public buildings as well. This is the matter of lighting conditions.
Bad lighting conditions are shown to be directly connected with lowered production in industry. An investigation of 446 plants by illuminating engineers showed that less than nine per cent had lighting arrangements that could be called excellent, 32 per cent had good lighting, 29 per cent fair, and 22 per cent were classed poor and very poor. The engineers' report that there is no doubt that bad lighting means financial loss.
It is not surprising that industrial workers and adults in general are troubled with defective sight considering that so many children have subnormal vision. Very little attention is being given to conservation in schools. This is apparent from the estimate, already mentioned, that 19,000,000 school children suffer from eye defects and that most of these defects could be lessened or entirely cured.
The consequences of uncorrected sight defects can be traced as clearly in the schools as in industry. Out of 100,000 children who failed in examinations last year in New York City, 50,000 were found to be suffering from eye defects needing treatment.
Guy A. Hiram, general director of the Eye Sight Conservation Council, emphasizes that teachers throughout the country should be trained to make certain simple tests of the eyes of pupils to determine those cases which are manifestly below normal and in need of immediate attention. This, it is claimed, would detect most of the extreme defects, and thereby much needless suffering would be avoided and the efficiency of the educational system would be considerably improved.
Lacks with a seeming justification more vehement than the case would call for but it keeps himself and his "cause" in the limelight. The actual work of railroad valuation is proceeding and will go on for another number of years until it is completed. It is a tremendous task and it is quite probable that no congress will upset and undo all the work of a decade in order to emphasize a political issue.
Mr. LaFollette cannot look upon the Ford candidacy for president with any degree of enthusiasm. No man wants to be driven off the road with a flivver.
It takes thirty years to finish some of the Chinese plays acted in China. It may take that to end the drama of the bandits.
One of the reasons perhaps why we have more print paper on the market is that the Congressional Record is no longer being printed.

JUST FOLKS
By EDGAR A. GUEST
A GARDEN.
A little garden is the sign
That man believes in God above,
And for the lovely things and fine
Has room within his heart for love.
I never see a pansy bad
Or rose in blossom in a yard,
A tulip with a yellow head,
But that house kindly I regard.
There dwells a man, I tell myself,
Who trains a summer vine to climb;
Despite the age's strife for pelf,
For beauty here he still has time.
Let cynics sneer that men are base
And sordid seekers after gold,
A little garden is the place
Where man's affections lie behold.
A little garden bright with bloom,
With all the beauty that it brings,
Is proof that someone's heart has room
To cherish nature's lovely things.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT
By ROY K. MOULTON
AIN'T IT THE TRUTH?
Oh, I and many others write
Some verse to ladies fair,
We sing of shoulders milky white,
And blond and brunette hair.
We sing our praise to Ann or May,
To Violet or Jane,
It is a pretty little play,
To poetize love's pain.
We prate of black eyes and of blue,
And necks like ivory roses red,
To each we vow our love is true,
As though we feigned to wed.
And yet if we but truth could tell,
Our work would soon be done;
For we our ardor soon would quell
By singing "One Love None."

Personal Health Service

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE
Mind, old, dense, high blood pressure occurs without any tendency to hardening of the arteries and hardening of the arteries is not necessarily accompanied by high blood pressure. But even a state of chronic or long-enduring high blood pressure or hypertension, if examination of the victim does not disclose a chronic nephritis the arteries are pretty sure to be diseased. Even though it is a long time, years and years, coming, when one has an abnormally high blood pressure constantly and the vessels fail to relax to the normal and remain there after reasonable and proper regulation of the habits of life, one may as well count himself a subject of C. V. D. and endeavor to cultivate the hygienic life.
Cardio-Vascular Degeneration has a grisly mournful sound, but it might be worse. Heart artery wearing out too early in life that is all. High living, wrong living, neglect of the fundamental laws of health, must be reckoned among the usual causes of hardening of the arteries, and of the various expressions of cardiovascular degeneration—chronic nephritis, apoplexy, heart muscle impairment, general breakdown if you prefer to evade the unpleasant truth—work if you like to deceive yourself or the unsophisticated public. The hygienic life is the life one wishes to lead when one discovers the life one has been leading is not likely to last much longer.
The toxins of several infectious diseases, such as pneumonia and typhoid fever, as well as that of syphilis, are now recognized as common factors of arterial degeneration. Moderate indulgence in alcoholic beverages is a direct cause of hardening of the arteries. The sin of overeating is prevalent among the prosperous middle class and the poor is on a par with alcohol poisoning as a cause of arteriosclerosis.
The strain and strain of business life, the rush and bustle and the nervous tension under which some folks like to imagine they live are all just cellophane. The strain of living under "high tension" for the same reason that the poor victim of the neurasthenia obsession has a "nervous spell" or a "breakdown" or some other convenient alibi when it is necessary to dodge some duty or responsibility in life. Q. What were the main features of the decision of the United States supreme court as to territorial expansion?
A. The principles settled by the decision of the supreme court of Dec. 2, 1901, are summarized as follows: (1) The constitution does not follow the flag until it is planted on new territory by special act of congress. (2) The extension of the sovereignty of the United States to new territory guarantees the enjoyment of liberty, the right to property and the protection of the United States to the people thus affected in securing justice and public order and promoting peaceful progress. (3) The islands acquired from Spain by the treaty of 1898, the Philippines, are "property of the United States" and congress can dispose of these islands in any way conducive to the interests of the people of the United States and of those islands.

HOROSCOPE
TUESDAY, MAY 29, 1923
Jupiter dominates this day in benefic aspect, according to astrology. Saturn is adverse.
Commerce seems to be rather favorably affected by this planetary government which presages increased trade with neighboring countries, especially those at the south.
Under this sway it is held that it is easier to see one's way out of difficulties than is usually the case.
Provision dealers are to be especially busy during the next two months, it is forecast.
Saturn is adverse to the rule for beginning new undertakings in business. Stores opened under this direction of the stars usually are profitable.
Buying and investment are supposed to be lucky when Jupiter is friendly to the interests of humanity in this day's aspects.
Speculation will be unusually widespread during the summer, owing to excitement regarding a mineral discovery.
An invention that requires a product now scarce, will bring millions to more than one firm of manufacturers and will start mining for a mineral seldom used, it is prognosticated.
The prophecy that the sea would yield material for leather, for shoes and other manufactures will come true in a large way within this year, the seers announce.
Religious troubles that affect the health of the popes are prognosticated.
The Roman Catholic church is to have a new world capital, if the stars are read aright.
The source of the Sun to Neptune is likely to cause President Harding much worry, for misunderstanding and misinterpretation of motives are supposed to be encouraged by this aspect.
Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a quiet year. Business should proceed as usual. Young women will have much attention and many romances.
Children born on this day are likely to be exceedingly serious and studious. These subjects of Gemini usually succeed in life, but much depends on the hour of birth.

Girlof Ghost Mountain

By J. ALLAN DUNN

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE. Mary Burrows, with a faint smile, looked at the man who sat on the porch of the old house on top of Ghost Mountain in Arizona. Peter Sheridan, New York lawyer, with auburn hair, was looking at her. He had been to the canyon, and he was recovering his health. His inseparable companion is a red Jackson, foreman of the ranch. They were a Chinaman, Quong, from the clutches of Hollister, a cattle rancher. Peter finds a way to the ranch on top of the mountain and rolls an attempt of the bad gang of Hollister to annoy the woman and falls in love with her. Hollister, swearing revenge, kidnaps Mary and takes her to the Bonanza mine. On the way he drinks poison mesal and goes blind, staggers off and is lost. Mary alone, is rescued later by Peter. He has ridden after her. Tales of marvelous gold in the canyon are told.

The joy that surged into her face changed as she saw the grey mustache of his face, the steady surges of his half-closed eyes as they searched her face. Peter was a blind man. He had not known a man with the very core of purpose. "It's all right, Peter," she said. "Nothing has happened." "Nothing," he repeated, and the dust and in the eyes that hardened again. "Where is he?" It was all he could do to articulate the words, all she could do to keep her hand steady. "I don't know, Peter. He's blind," Sheridan blinked at her uncertainty. Jackson croaked out a meaning. "Ah."

"Vasquez' booze," he said. "Got to get him," managed Sheridan. He pointed to his throat. Water. "In the canyon. Plenty of it. And Hollister has a cache somewhere. I think where he hid the horses last night. There is bacon and coffee. I know." Jackson, man and a cackle of approval. Sheridan whistled to the mare who limped up and he motioned for the girl to mount. She's lame. I'm not in bad shape. Now you've come. She said it to both of them but it was meant for the man who had twice called Peter. And who had not forgotten it, despite his condition.

With due caution they entered the canyon and turned into the side ravine. Sheridan and Jackson drank and drank themselves of acid, then drank again in little swallows as if they were tasting nectar. The mare had had her share and fallen to snoring. "The man who says there's anything better than water," announced Jackson presently. "In a plumb camp. The only trouble is it's too cheap and plenty, and it isn't being properly advertised. Me, I'm going to look for them hawasses. Incidentally, grub. Incidentally, Hollister."

Alone together, Mary Burrows outlived to Sheridan what had happened.

"Thank God you are unharmed," he said. "I've come through the night searching for you with hell in my heart and my finger on my trigger, achin' to kill him, to shoot him like a mad dog, every foot of the way. I should have given him no chance. I would have shot his heart out. And the score is not even yet. Or, if it is, I want to see it written."

She shuddered a little at the implacability of his voice. "If he is hiding somewhere, in ambush."

"There's no cover within pistol range of us. And Jackson can take care of himself. If the humor has hours yet, if he ever does. But I mean to be sure before I leave this place. We'll eat first because we all need it. Then we'll find him."

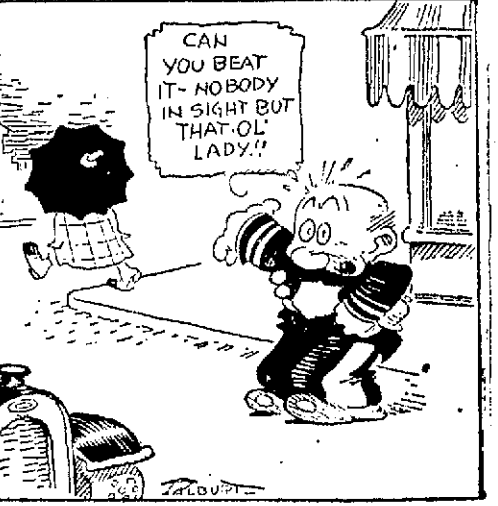

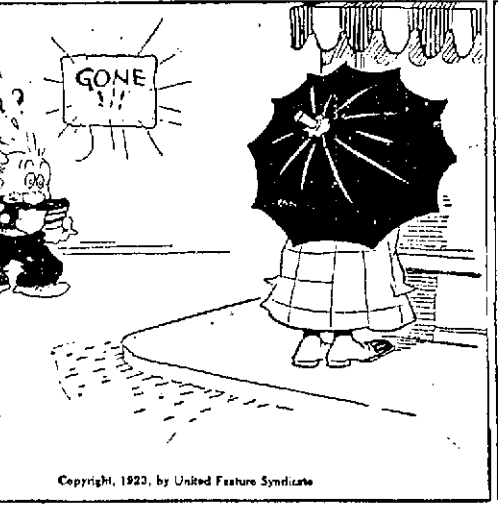

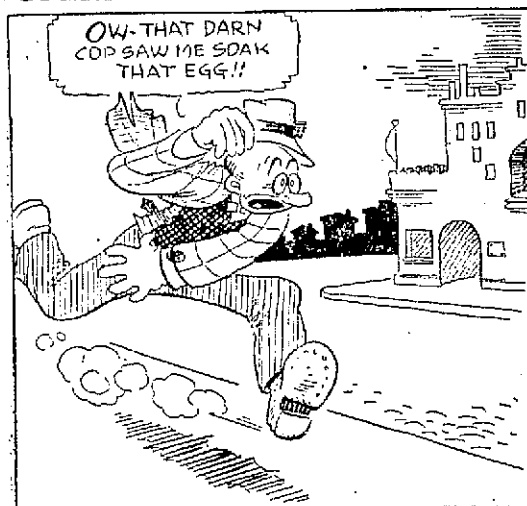

"He's blind, Peter." Her tone puzzled him. "Would you forgive him—after all he did, all he attempted?"

"God stopped him. God kept me safe. You thanked him for that just now. Hollister went out into the night blind. You say he may not recover. Is that not punishment enough?"

Sheridan sat stern and silent. The girl studied his face. It was relentless. "For my sake, Peter," she ventured. "It was I he meant to injure."

"And me, through you. It is for your sake that we shall find him. He shall have no chance to say he carried you off for a day or night, and embellish his yarn to his own glory with his lying tongue. I don't put him in his grave. I'll make him stand on the brink of it and tell him how deep it is, and how always open for his reception."

TODAY'S RECIPES

Celery Soup—The tops and tougher portions of the celery are the parts to use for soup. Cut them up with a good sized onion, cover with cold water and let boil until tender. Rub through sieve. Take a good tablespoon of butter and cup of flour, mix smooth and add gradually one pint of milk. Let come to a boil, all celery and onion, season with salt, pepper and celery seed and serve with crackers or croutons.

Cheese Sauce—Make a good cream sauce or milk gravy, and when it is at boiling point add from half a cup to a cup of grated cheese. Stir until melted and serve over the potatoes. A Delicious Bread, Custard—Three slices buttered bread, one quart milk, four eggs, one-half cup sugar, one teaspoon vanilla extract, few preserved cherries, candied peel. Beat the eggs and sugar slightly, then add milk and vanilla. Pour into a buttered baking dish and set the bread on top with buttered side up. Bake in moderate oven till firm. Decorate nicely on top with cherries and candied peel, and serve cold.

To Tie Comfort—When tying a comfort, begin at the seam in the center and make both ways for knots. The seam will be less conspicuous with a row of knots over it and an even work in the center of the comfort, which is the most prominent part, will be avoided.

The Tea We Drink—Scented teas are teas which have been perfumed by putting the tea leaves and fragrant blossoms together. A flower with an odor similar to jasmine is good. This flower is put in with the leaves after the tea is prepared for sale.

Drawers That Stick—Rub some ordinary soap on the edge of the drawer that is inclined to stick.

Care of Clothes—If the clothes you wear are looked over each time before they are put away, brushed, buttons tightened, and your wardrobe cannot help but be neat and in good condition at all times.

Cutlery Bleached—In cutting out baking powder biscuits you can manage so that there will be no scraps left. You may have time to shape the last piece but you will not have the tiny odd shaped scraps you usually have left over.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl just past 18. My mother died four years ago and I have kept house since. When I go out I try to act just as nice and ladylike as I can, but somehow or other I never get the fellow I would care for. I am considered fair looking.

About two years ago I saw a fellow that I fell in love with just by seeing him, but being so young I tried to get him out of my mind. Later on I became better acquainted and the better I knew him the more I liked him. I really love him now and I can't get him out of my mind. It is getting so that I can't eat or sleep.

He has been going with another girl for about three years. They don't seem to get along somehow. His family don't want him to marry her. They always put but they always make up. Do you think there is a chance for me?

How could I win him? I often see him and he treats me nicely and shows respect. BROKEN HEARTED.

Yours is a very natural one for a girl of 18. So often a girl of that age loves deeply but her love is unrequited. Perhaps it is better that she is not loved in return because the time is not right for her to have her love dream answered.

Don't become discouraged; keep on loving, but try not to let your thoughts control you. Also force yourself to take an interest in other young people. It may be two or three years, or even longer, but some time you will love and your love will be returned. Then you will be only too thankful that you did not have your way in this matter. The right man will come to you, whether it is the one you love or some one else. Only have faith that matters will work out naturally and for the best.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: We are two good friends and there is another girl who has been very kind to our friendship. At times she takes real care to us and then she doesn't look at us or speak to us. She has often told my friend that I talked about her and about her. I never have any doubt about what to do. Kindly advise us. JUST TWO FRIENDS.

Probably the most satisfactory thing to do would be to try to overlook the "unlucky" things that are said. If, however, the sting remains and I feel feeling except in the matter should be talked over, so that the accused party will have an opportunity to clear herself. Speak to the girl who has such an unfortunate disposition and be friendly, but be guarded in what you say to her so that she will not be able to stretch the truth and cause trouble.

SOULLESS: You are defeating your own end by trying to prevent the man you love from seeing the other girl. No wonder you are torn with jealousy, under the circumstances. But my advice is to stop worrying about her. In fact when she comes to town, tell him that you have thought the matter over and you want him to see her if he cares to. Say that you do not want to stand in the way. Hence a belief in his love and do not let him see that you doubt his loyalty to you. You cannot make the man faithful by force; but if he has freedom to do as he pleases there is far more chance that he will please to love you more than any one else. No matter what you do, do not let him see that you are afraid of losing him. A man hates to have a woman fuss and worry and show fear that love will not last.

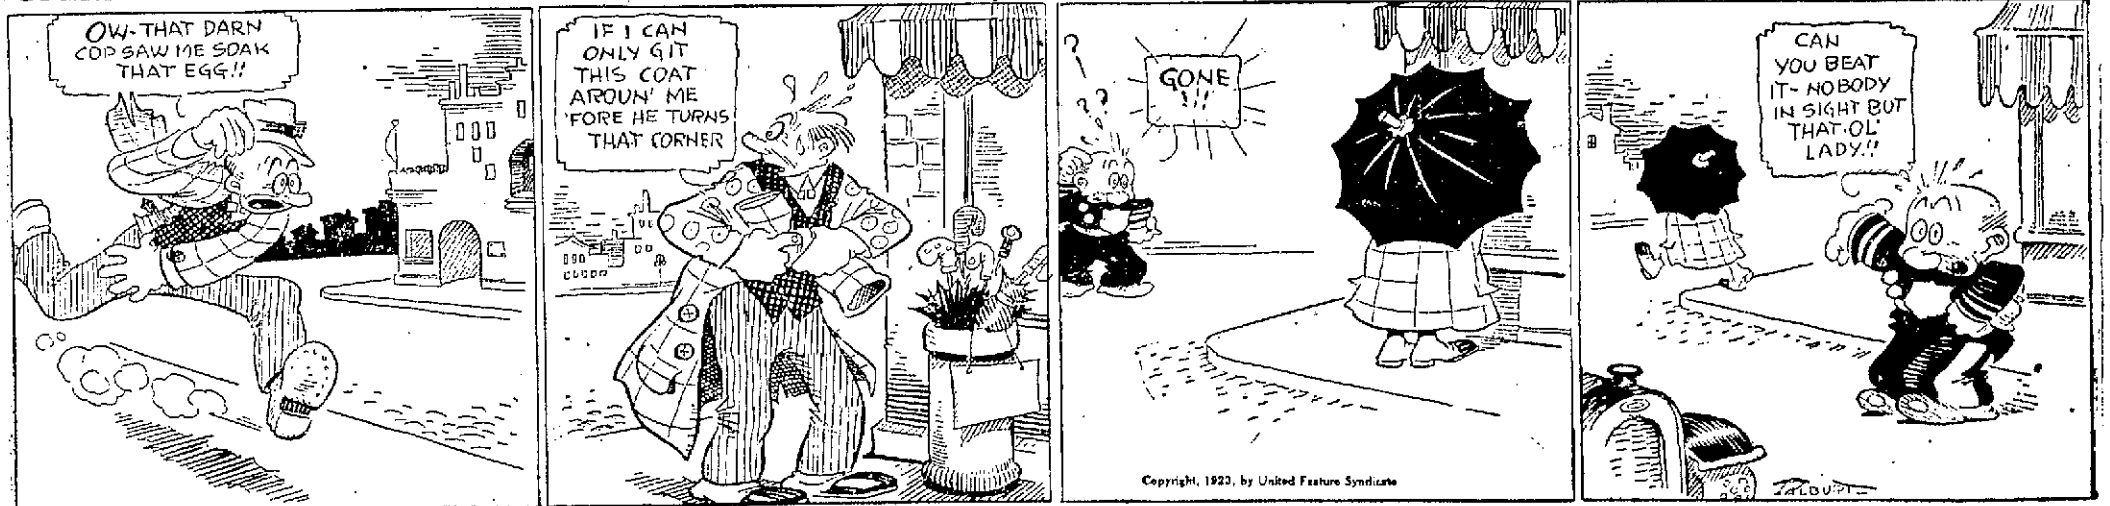

Lady in Distress—The bad pit left from chicken pox can be easily filled out by a dermatologist. I am sorry, but I cannot suggest any particular person for doing this work.

Miss Harriette—Should suspect that a person who arose every morning with a headache had liver or some other organic disturbance. The dark circles around the eyes would also indicate such a condition. Consult a doctor.

every day there will be less tendency to stiffness. An excess of oil shows a weakness in the glands. Massage so improves the circulation that it overcomes this trouble.

Santa Maria—If cocoa does not disagree with your disposition there is no reason why you should not drink it all the time.

Pat—I will be glad to mail you the eyelash formula if you send a stamped addressed envelope.

Blue—Consult the doctor about this tendency to rashes and red spots on the skin.

Mary—I from your description of yourself I should say that you are overweight. Doubtless if you dieted until you became normal the very full cheeks and double chin would disappear. The bust formula will be mailed to you upon receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

Evela R.—There are often many excellent suggestions given in the "Chats" on care of the scalp and hair, so if you read them regularly you will acquire all the necessary information. To remove dandruff massage all into scalp the night before the shampoo.

Cucumber juice is a simple and handy bleach for complexion or hands. The practice of shaving the back of the neck is bad as the hair becomes more abundant and much coarser. Try clipping it, or let the hair grow longer and cover up some of the stray ends.

Rachel—When you purchase powder ask for the tint that suits your skin. Try a toilet water or witch hazel to relieve that flushing of the face in the summer time.

Annex—Extract the coarser hair on your chin by using a blunt end tweezers, and if any others show bleach them with peroxide.

Kay—The ammonia that is sold for household uses is not the same strength as that sold by the druggists.

Cotton Top and Just a Girl—The advice above to "Miss R." will solve your problems.

Miss M. K.—I think the eyelash tonic for which I am glad to mail a formula, would improve those lashes even though they have been injured through burning.

Mrs. J. L. E.—The best hair tonic that I know of is the one for which I send out a formula, upon receipt of a stamped addressed envelope.

of one year to weigh the same because some start out with a much larger framework than others. But no matter how small or how large your baby is he will—if he is well nourished—weigh a certain amount in proportion to his weight.

The heights of boys and girls throughout the first year are not much different, usually about an inch less for the girl. Below are given only the boy's heights and if your baby is a girl you may deduct one inch and arrive at a good approximate height for her.

At birth the average boy measures 20-21 inches; at three months, 22 1/2; at six months, 24 1/2; at one year, 29 1/2. Arranging these few general figures in their proper places, next to height, for the different ages, you can get an idea how well your baby is keeping up his weight for his height.

Leonard Off Form for Bout With Mitchell Tonight

WINDY CITY WOMEN SPONSOR BATTLE, BOUT TO TEST LAW

Chicago — Benny Leonard, of New York, world lightweight boxing champion and Pinkie Mitchell, of Milwaukee, challenger, will meet in a round match here Tuesday night.

Chicago society women are sponsoring the contest and the proceeds will go to charity.

It will be Leonard's first bout since his September loss to Jess Willard, and while he has been consistently successful here and there, his condition and form are not what they were in his last fight.

Mitchell, although it is indicated both will meet under 140 pounds at 3 p. m., Leonard says his weight will be within a pound of that weight.

Mitchell, a boxing freak with his five feet eleven inches of height, will have five inches of reach over Leonard. There is not the difference in their other measurements Mitchell's height would indicate.

Leonard has defeated Mitchell's brother, Eddie, twice by knockouts. Pinkie and Leonard were matched two years ago in Milwaukee but the bout was called off because of a muscular affliction.

The fight Tuesday night will be made a test of the Illinois Anti-Prize fight law, which provides that a prize fight will be arrested and the case taken to the state supreme court. Police will not interfere with the fighting.

THE SMALLEST boy in the state high school meets, weighing less than 30 pounds, of Edgerton, received a great hand from the crowd of more than 2,000 spectators. Why? Simply because, though more than half a lap behind, the midget stuck to the grind and finished. It was the finest display of endurance in the state. The youngster will make good yet, if he continues such a display of nerve.

JANESVILLE high may not have done much in the past, but the boys went through the motions just the same. With this in mind, the practice sport, which was the only one, was held. The boys were out on the field, and the coaches were in the stands. They were in the stands. They were in the stands.
